Perone Communal Cemetery Extension

In an extension to the town cemetery at Perone in the Somme region, 1595 Commonwealth servicemen are buried or commemorated.

Peronne, in the Somme region, was taken by the German on 24/09/1914. On 18/03/1917, the 40th and 48th Divisions captured the town, but it was recovered by the Germans on the 23/03/1918. It changed hands for the last time on

01/09/1918, when it was taken by the 2nd Australian Division

The cemetery extension was begun by the 48th (South Midland) Division in March 1917, used by the Germans in 1918, and resumed by Australian units in September 1918. At the Armistice it contained 177 graves, now in Plots I and II. It was then enlarged when graves were brought in from the battlefields north and east of Peronne and from small cemeteries in the area.

1897 in Belavon, Belmont, Belfast. Before Inst, he attended Methodist College, Belfast. He was working in the linen trade, and joined the Ulster Volunteer Force in 1913, followed by the Ulster Division on its formation. He was gazetted to Second lieutenant on 22nd September 1914 and promoted to Lieutenant the following year, serving in France and Flanders from October 1915. He took part in the advance on Thiepval on 1st July 1916, and before becoming attached to the RFC in September, he was awarded the Military Cross. The citation, published in the London Gazette on 20th October 1916, reads as follows – “For conspicuous gallantry in action when his platoon suffered heavy casualties, he rallied all available men and got them forward into the enemy’s lines’ Later, when put in charge of an attack, he reached his objective, consolidated it and held it against repeated bombing attacks.”

He was killed in aerial combat on 10/11/1916 while flying a Fienvillers Sopwith 1½ Strutter. Lt Morton Allport of the RFC was also killed in the incident. The plane came down behind the German lines. Major Laurence, RFC, wrote “he was just the sort of fellow we want. He had taken very quickly to the work, and had made a very keen and good observer. He was always so cheery and willing too, and we shall all miss him very much. He was a fine brave boy, and I shall always think of him with admiration.” Captain Vancour, RFC wrote, “it was a frightful blow to us all when your son went down, for he was the most popular in the mess, and we all thought a great deal of him. He was always so cheery and full of life and such a plucky little fellow. Major Gordon, 2nd in command, 10th Royal Irish Rifles, after the fighting at Thiepval, wrote “Under the most difficult circumstances and murderous fire, he behaved with coolness and gallantry for two whole days and nights, in spite of his being the only officer left in the company. I am sure you will feel proud of him, as we all do.” He was originally buried where he was found, to the southeast of Bapaume, in a spot described as “a few yards west of the Rocquigny-Le-Mesnil road and a few yards north of the railway, close to the point where the railway cuts the road.” Hermies Hill British Cemetery, Pas De Calais, France.
